

September 12, 2019
Curbed NY

In Cobble Hill, another River Park condo launches sales from $975K

The Brooklyn megaproject's latest debut is a condo with waterfront views

By Amy Plitt

Impressions 3,160,432

Renderings by Williams New York

Another piece of the puzzle at River Park, the megaproject replacing Cobble Hill's erstwhile Long Island College Hospital, is officially on the market. Developer Fortis Property Group has now launched sales at 1 River Park, the tower rising at the corner of Hicks Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The building, designed by FXCollaborative with Hill West Architects, will have just 48 apartments over its 20 stories. The architecture sets it apart from the megaproject's other buildings; the structure is “inspired by the fluidity of water,” according to a fact sheet, with undulating balconies on the west-facing side of the building. (That also means many of the apartments have stunning views of the Statue of Liberty, New York Harbor, and beyond.)

September 12, 2019
Curbed NY

The apartments are a mix of studios to one-bedrooms, and start about 110 feet above street level. Each one comes with predictably fancy features—custom millwork, high-end appliances, and the like—as well as high ceilings and large windows to maximize those views. The available apartments range from a 538-square-foot studio asking just under $1 million, to a 2,239-square-foot three-bedroom penthouse (with a balcony) asking $4.9 million.

Its amenities are also fairly bonkers: Across more than 17,000 square feet are plush perks like a heated outdoor pool and gym deck, private residents’ club, billiard room, and more.

September 12, 2019

Curbed NY

The building is one of seven currently in the works as part of the River Park megaproject. Recall that the dispute between Fortis and the Cobble Hill community came over the developer's desire to rezone the area surrounding the former LICH campus, which would have allowed for more dense towers but also included affordable housing. When an agreement over rezoning couldn't be reached, Fortis decided to proceed with the as-of-right scheme.

Since then, several other River Park properties have debuted, including condos in the renovated Polhemus Building, several adjacent townhouses, and a new 25-unit condo called 5 River Park.

September 12, 2019
Curbed NY

<https://ny.curbed.com/2019/9/12/20862707/cobble-hill-brooklyn-1-river-park-sales-launch>